List of fees Displays

New Certificate basic model	Fee (EUR)
TCO Certified Displays	5700
TCO Certified Edge Displays	2850

All sales names used in the marketing of a display must be registered on the certificate. There must be at least one sales name registered on each certificate. The sales name is the most unique name the brand owner uses to identify the product in marketing (for example on their webpage). (A product may also have several regulatory model names that identify different hardware configurations but these names are normally not used in the marketing).

Several model names may be placed on the same certificate by using wildcards (*) in the model name as long as they are all marketed under the same sales names, share the same display size, resolution, aspect ratio and chassis appearance.

Fees for a new certificate include 5 Sales Names, 5 Type Keys and Critical Components as long as they are included in the same Application Form.

Changing a Certificate	Fee (EUR)

TCO Certified Edge Headsets	1450

New Certificate series models	Fee (EUR)
TCO Certified Headset model – small difference	1450
TCO Certified Headsets – insignificant difference	0

When certifying a series of models a discount will be given on all models belonging to the series that are technically similar to the basic model. More similarity gives more discount according to the below categories.

All models in a series must share these aspects:

- There must be a series name that cover all products
- Same type of communication (wireless/wired)
- Same type of housing design
- Same type of speakers

Small difference are considered as

- Different number of speakers (one or two)
- Different design of microphone (with or without sound insulation)
- Different types of connectors
- Different types of attachment devices for head and ears

Insignificant difference are considered as

- Different user-exchangeable accessories
- Different countries power plug of charger
- Different color of housing

Each model must have at least one sales name (i.e. the name of the product used in marketing) that must be included in the application. Fees for a new basic Certificate include 5 Sales Names if they are included in the same Application Form or provided at one occasion within 30 days from TCO Development's receipt of the Application Form. The prices for series models include 1 Sales Name.

Updating/changing a Certificate
